Objective

"Vocational Guidance in CLIL" is an ERASMUS+ project to promote the free and successful movement of workers in Europe through the use of a Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) methodology.

The partnership has developed a training platform to support, in terms of both vocational guidance and language training, all those people who want to have a work experience in one of the target countries: Austria, Belgium, Italy, Spain, and the United Kingdom.

Training Platform

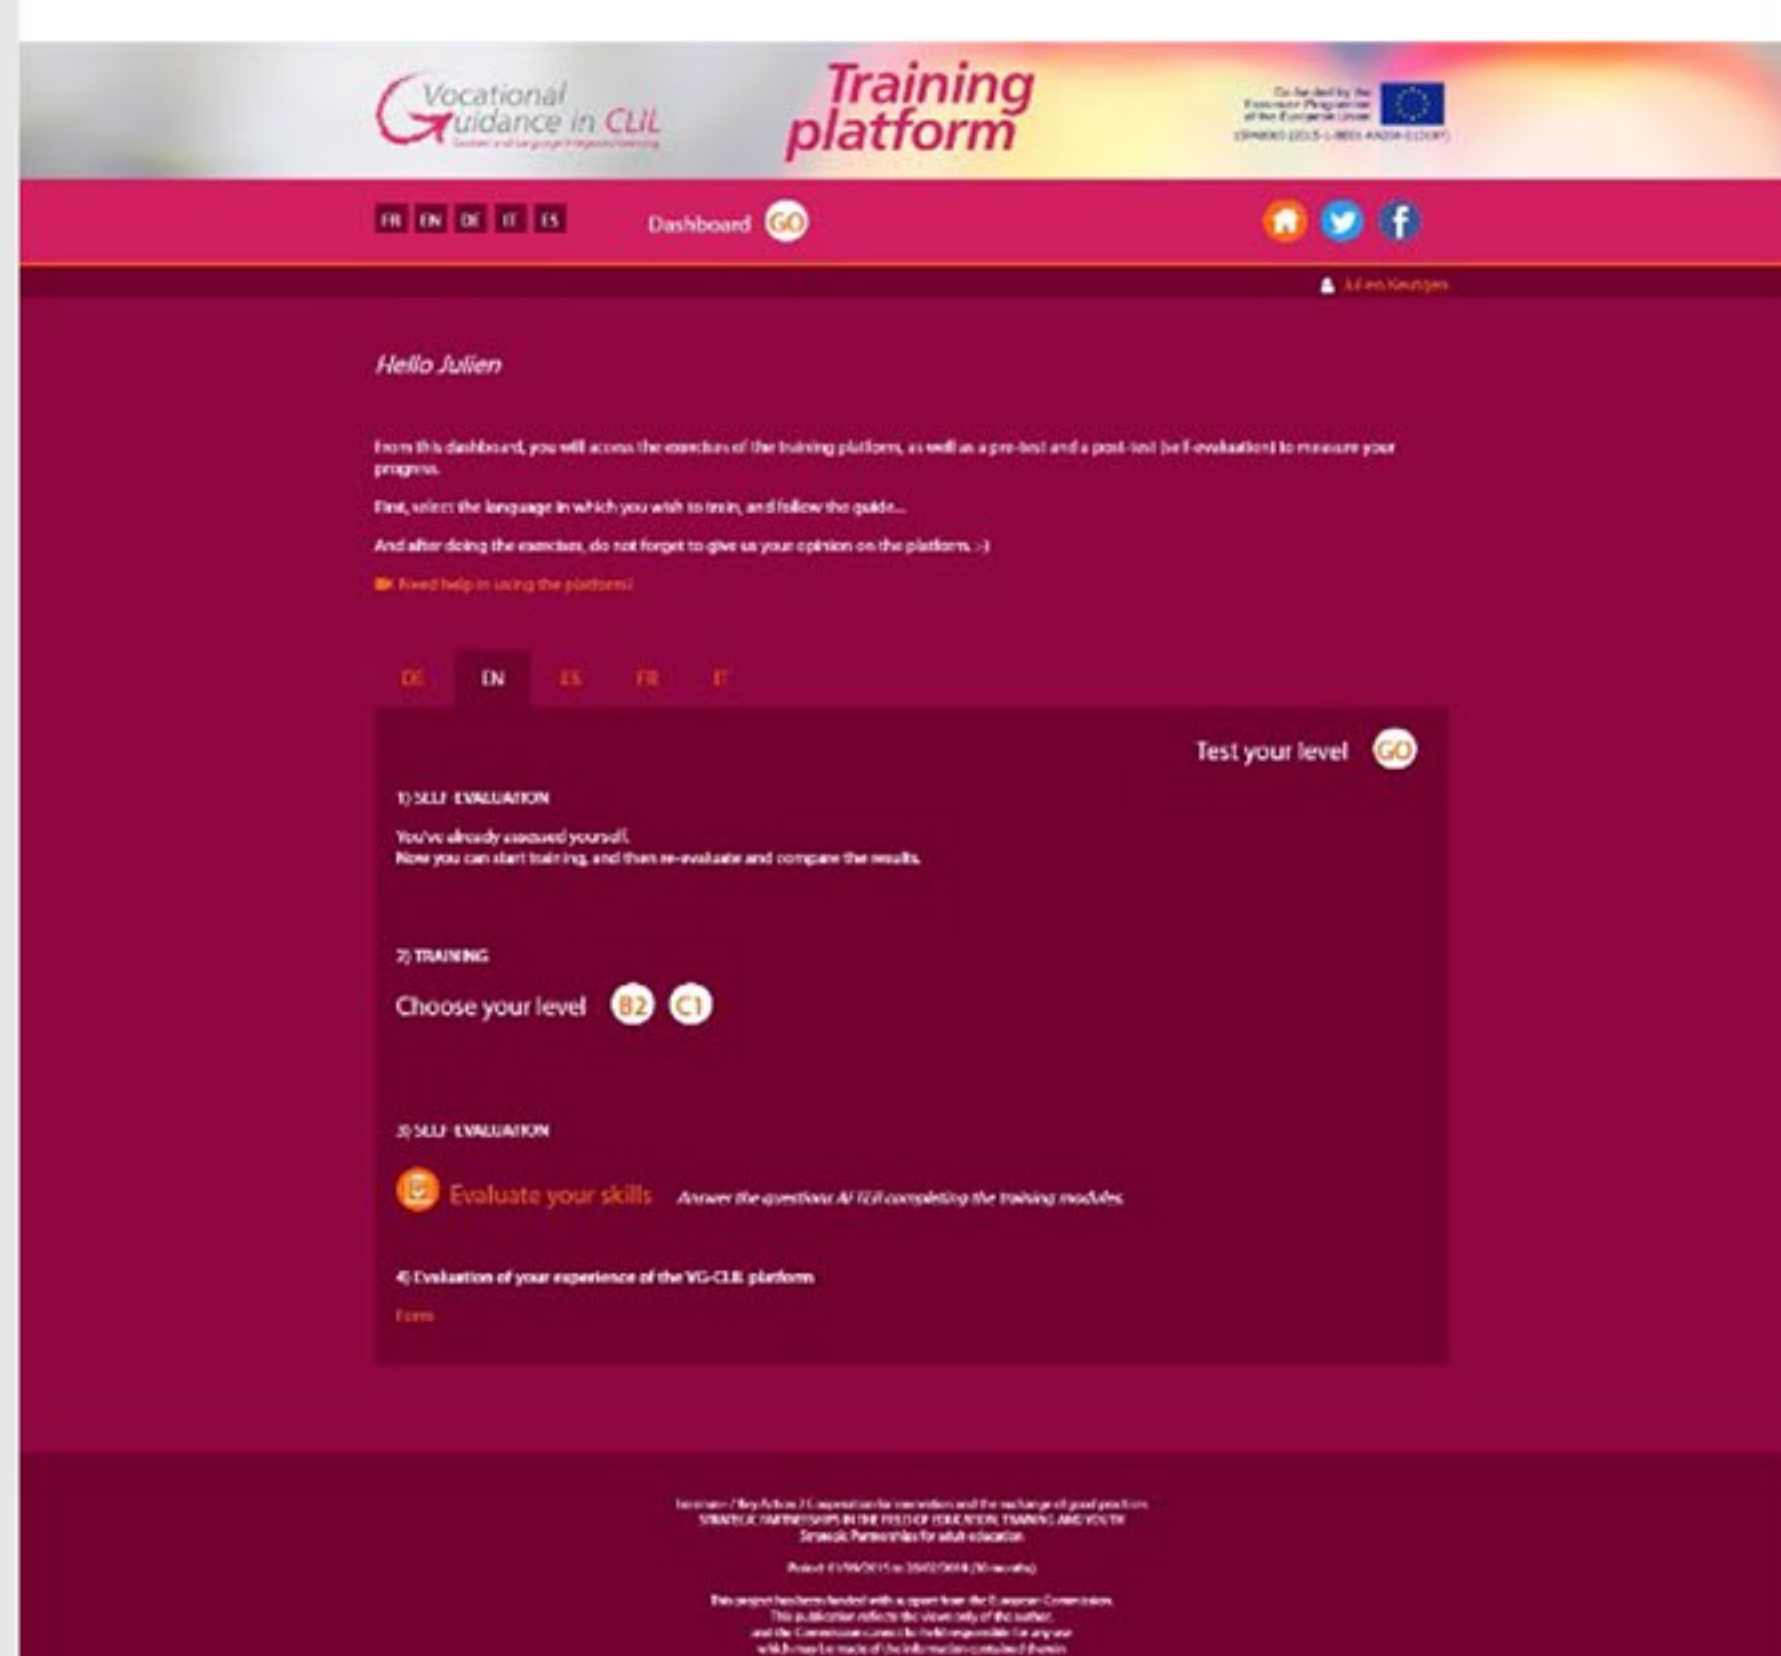

The training material follows the CLIL methodology, addressing topics that are useful to train people for working in one target country while improving their command of the national language of that country (German, French, Italian, Spanish or English).

Two language levels, B2 and C1 of the CEFR, are available, with the assumption that all users have at least a B1 language level.

At each level, the platform offers 4 Learning Modules, with various training inputs (texts, videos, and audio files), on the following subjects:

- Job Search Skills
- Job Applications
- Interview Skills
- Intercultural skills

The content is designed to be used online on any support (computer, tablet, and smartphone) and is accessible after a free registration at the address: vgclil.eu/training-platform/.

Project End and Future

The "Vocational Guidance in CLIL" project officially ended on the 28th of February 2018.

For two years and a half, the five project partners have worked together, each bringing their expertise (in vocational guidance, language training, ICT...) to design a training platform that would meet at best the needs of would-be mobile workers.

If the project ends, the skills, the platform lives on, and remains available to all interested people.

Moreover, the partners are currently writing a follow-up to VGCLIL, with the purpose to exploit the current platform and extend its target audience.

More news about it, hopefully, after the selection results in September 2018.
